The University of Cambridge has a Hybrid Working Policy that aims to enable as many staff as possible to work in a hybrid way if they so wish, whilst recognising that some roles will include tasks that can only be performed on University premises.

Applications are invited for a new Faculty member who can contribute to research and teaching in Medieval Italian Literature and Culture, in the Faculty of Modern and Medieval Languages and Linguistics (MMLL) from 1 September 2025 or as soon as possible thereafter.

The appointment may be made at any grade between Assistant Professor (Grade 9), Associate Professor (Grade 10) and Professor (Grade 11). Applications are welcome at all levels, and the eventual grade of appointment will be commensurate to the appointee's experience and standing in the field.

Candidates will have a record of, or clear potential for, outstanding research in Italian Medieval Literature and Culture, along with a broad-based knowledge of the current state of Italian literary and cultural studies and Medieval studies. We welcome candidates whose research and/or teaching demonstrate the potential for collaborative or cross-disciplinary work. The appointee will contribute at undergraduate (BA) and postgraduate (MPhil and PhD) levels to the teaching and examining of Medieval Italian Literature and Culture, and generally contribute to teaching and administration of the Italian Section and the Faculty.

The teaching of Italian Medieval Literature has a long and distinguished history at Cambridge, and the appointee will be expected to take an active and leading role in sustaining and re-imagining—according to their own specialist area(s) of research—this history.

The role includes an active contribution to the administration of the Section's and Faculty's activities. We welcome applicants with a record of excellence in research, commensurate with career stage, and a strong trajectory. Candidates will have relevant teaching experience, have successfully completed a PhD in a relevant field, collegial engagement or potential in research, teaching, administration and outreach in Italian Studies. A fluent or near-fluent command of both Italian and English is essential.

The appointee will be mentored and supported in their career development, and a range of programmes is available to help Early Career Researchers achieve their goals.

The successful candidate will hold a PhD in the field of the post. Responsibilities will include:

- Teaching and supervision in medieval Italian Literature and Culture at undergraduate and postgraduate levels
- Contributing to teaching and supervision for the MPhil in Literature, Culture and Thought
- Designing and delivering a specialist MPhil module
- Supervision of doctoral students
- Convening and delivering lectures and supervisions for a range of undergraduate papers, as necessary
- Taking leadership in cultivating comparative modern studies across MMLL and creating collaborations across the School of Arts and Humanities and the School of Humanities and Social Sciences
- Contributing to the administration of the Italian Section and the Faculty of MMLL as needed, including taking on leadership roles in both Section and Faculty

The appointee will also be expected to contribute more generally to teaching-related and research-related administration, including selecting, interviewing and advising staff and students (undergraduate and postgraduate), helping with outreach and initiatives to widen participation, and sitting on relevant committees.

The standard teaching load for Faculty lectures and classes is around 40-48 hours per year.

The appointee will be expected to perform other usual departmental duties, such as those associated with examinations. They will be expected to investigate new areas of research and funding opportunities, and submit grant applications. They will also be required to write papers for publication, attend conferences, network with national/international colleagues and give presentations.

The University of Cambridge is committed in its pursuit of academic excellence to equality of opportunity and to a proactive and inclusive approach to equality, which supports and encourages all under-represented groups, promotes an inclusive culture, and values diversity.

The Faculty of Modern and Medieval Languages and Linguistics

The Faculty of Modern and Medieval Languages and Linguistics, founded in 1879, is a world-leading centre for teaching and research in language, culture and linguistics at the University of Cambridge and is part of the School of Arts and Humanities. The Faculty comprises eight subject areas: French, German, Italian, Modern Greek, Slavonic Studies, Spanish & Portuguese, Theoretical & Applied Linguistics, and Film. With nearly 1,000 students (over 770 undergraduates, 65 MPhil students and 140 PhD students) we are one of the largest humanities Faculties in the University and one of the largest languages Faculties nationally. The Faculty combines excellence in teaching, academic rigour and research with a strong tradition of pastoral support for its students. It is a vibrant place to study and work, and since 2016 these factors have regularly helped it top University league tables. In terms of research excellence, the Faculty has consistently been ranked among the very best in the world in national and international assessments. For example, in the 2021 Research Excellence Framework (REF) it was in clear first position for 'research power' among Faculties of its type in the UK.

The Italian Section

The Italian Section has an outstanding record of teaching and research over a broad range of Italian Studies. Courses are offered both at undergraduate and MPhil levels, and the breadth of the Section is also reflected in the PhD research it supports. The Section prides itself on a vibrant, supportive and progressive research and teaching culture.

All undergraduates in the Faculty initially study two languages. The average first-year undergraduate in-take for Italian is around 30 students. Over the duration of their course, students may choose from a wide range of options in Italian Studies, comparative studies or linguistics. Undergraduate degree courses in the Faculty normally last four years (including the year abroad).

The Section also participates in three MPhil courses (Literature, Culture Thought, Film and Screen Studies, and Linguistics). Colleagues in the Section supervise PhD students across a full range of Italian Studies, including the literature and culture of all periods, history and thought, film, and linguistics.

Further information is available on the Faculty's website, <https://www.mml.cam.ac.uk> and in the University's Guide to Courses. More detailed Information on courses in Italian is available via <https://www.mml.cam.ac.uk/italian>. The website includes a list of members of the Section, showing their teaching and research interests.

Vision

The Strategic Vision of the School of Arts and Humanities is to retain its position in the world top five. We see this not as a simple metric but as a challenge for which we must foster a culture and practice of openness: to countries and traditions around the globe, to major themes, to new ways of teaching, to diversity in our student intake and staff recruitment, to inclusiveness in our career development, and to the breaking down of structures that prevent us achieving the ambitious goals we set ourselves

The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made - and continues to make - a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff, committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society.”

Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor, 2023
